

Pilot Customer Interviews - June

Summary of six 30-minute interviews with retail managers and operations leads

Recurring themes

Theme	Mentioned by	Notes
Weekly reporting is repetitive	6 of 6	Most teams rebuild similar spreadsheet views every Monday.
Mobile alerts	4 of 6	Managers want a quick heads-up when sales drop sharply.
CSV export	3 of 6	Useful for finance hand-off, but not a daily workflow.
Permissions	5 of 6	Store managers should not see every region by default.

Selected comments

"I do not need another dashboard open all day. I need to know if something looks wrong before the Monday meeting." - Store manager, Los Angeles

"Export is fine, but if permissions are messy we cannot roll this out across stores." - Operations lead, San Francisco

"A phone notification for a big sales drop would save me from checking three different systems." - Regional manager

Research takeaway

The reporting workflow is clearly painful, but the strongest unmet request is not another reporting view. Four participants independently asked for a lightweight alert or notification when a store deviates from its normal pattern.
